Destrucción falls to silence campus radio stations

BY DARYL APPEL

The destruction of the music department's radio station, KSDP-FM, in 1974 left a void in the campus community. The station, located in the basement of the Administration Building, was a hub for student news, music, and entertainment. When the fire occurred, the station's broadcast equipment was destroyed, taking with it all the music and memories of its listeners. The impact was felt across the campus, leaving a quiet and somber atmosphere.

KDSR-FM, the station's replacement, was born out of necessity and determination. It was a testament to the resilience of the student body, who came together to create a new community center for music and expression. Today, KDSR-FM continues to thrive, carrying on the legacy of its predecessor and providing a platform for students to express themselves through music and other creative outlets.

This story is a reminder of the power of music and the importance of preserving it. It is a tribute to the students who fought to keep music alive on campus and a celebration of the community that continues to support and celebrate it.
